

Overview of operating query systems relevant to migration and asylum

Updated on 06/04/2021

What is a query system?

A query system is a tool used to collect precise information on a topical issue in a relatively short timeframe. Query systems in the area of migration and asylum allow participating entities to formulate a question and receive replies on a variety of issues concerning policies, practice and legislation, as well as elicit information on statistical trends. This information is aimed to address the countries' immediate information needs in the above areas and obtain a comparative overview of the situation in the other countries that can serve as a point of reference. Information collected through queries may inform policies, practice, or legislative changes on the given subject matter, with audience ranging from senior officials and policy makers to thematic experts with an interest on the topic.

Currently, a number of query systems relevant to migration and asylum exist, managed by the European Migration Network (EMN), European Asylum Support Office (EASO), General Directors' Immigration Services Conference (GDISC) and Intergovernmental Consultations on Migration, Asylum and Refugees (IGC).

About the actors

- The European Asylum Support Office (EASO) is a European Union agency, established in 2011, to assist Member States in the implementation of the Common European Asylum System and provide support to Member States, whose asylum systems are under pressure. Under its founding Regulation, among others, EASO acts as a centre of expertise on asylum; contributes to the development of the Common European Asylum; and provides evidence-based input for EU policy-making and legislation in all areas having a direct or indirect impact on asylum.
- The European Migration Network (EMN) is an EU network of migration and asylum experts, established in 2008, who work together to gather objective, policy-relevant, comparable and up-to-date information and knowledge on emerging issues relating to asylum and migration in Europe. EMN produces inter alia reports, studies and policy briefs with analysis of policy and legislative development and implementation. The EMN is coordinated by the European Commission, which is assisted by service providers.
- The General Directors' Immigration Services Conference (GDISC) is a network established in 2004 in order to facilitate practical and operational cooperation in the field of asylum and migration between the Immigration Services of the different member countries. The various forms of cooperation include exchanging experiences, developing best practices, informal meetings between the General Directors.
- The Intergovernmental Consultations on Migration, Asylum and Refugees (IGC), is an informal, non-decision making forum for intergovernmental information exchange and policy debate on issues of relevance to the management of international migratory flows. Created in 1985, the IGC currently brings together 18 Participating States, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the International Organization for Migration, and the EU.

Why this overview?

There are substantial differences in the query systems operated by the four actors, with each system having its own relative strengths and added-value. Users can profit from the advantages offered by the four query systems in choosing which forum to use for their query. The aim of this overview is to provide experts in national administrations, who may be interested in getting insights from other states in regards to migration and asylum issues, with key information about each query system to consider when deciding to launch a query via a specific system to best suit their information needs.

Please note that EMN, EASO, GDISC and IGC are looking into modalities of how to address possible duplication of query proposals and avoid repetitive requests directed at countries replying to a query. To this end, in case a similar query has been already answered, upon communication among the four organizations, a possibility will be explored to share with you an overview of already existing information. Based on this, you will have the option to either request a more up-to-date follow up query or, should the provided overview be sufficient, withdraw your request.
